Jessica Hoag is the Recreational Use and Public Access Coordinator for Montana Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC). She has worked for the trust lands management division of DNRC for over ten years administering a variety of state land use programs including renewable energy, commercial, and residential leasing. As the recreational use and public access coordinator, Jess administers statewide policy for general and commercial recreation on trust land, including public education and outreach, and is the point of contact for access opportunities. Jess is from Helena Montana, where she currently resides with her husband and two rowdy little boys.
